CULVER AND CONNOR INDICTED

Former Employees of the E. J. & E. Charged With Embezzlement

WERE AGENT AND CASHIER

Sensational Action of the Grand Jury in Indicting Charles E. Culver, as the Man Higher Up

The grand jury finished its work on Wednesday morning and, out of 27 cases examined, returned 22 indictments.

Two sensational features mark the grand jury's report, as follows:

First—The indictment of Charles E. Culver, late agent for the E. J. & E. at the Waukegan office, named now as a principal in the railroad thefts in which former Cashier Joe Connor was implicated as a principal at first and later as principal and accomplice. The indictment charges embezzlement.

Second—The indictment of Joe Connor, late cashier of the E. J. & E. on the charge of embezzlement of funds of the company in Waukegan.

While, ever since the Connor case came into the limelight, there had been statements intimating that "somebody higher up" would be implicated in the thefts, and Culver's name has been whispered as the one referred to, at no time did Culver's name come out publicly as the man who would be charged with being a principal or an accomplice with Connor.

Culver was credited at the time, with being the man who asked the auditors to make the examination of the books which led to the specific charges being made against Connor.

Culver was in the employ of the company many years. After Connor fled and was later incarcerated in the asylum, Culver still continued to act as agent. Three weeks ago, announcement was made that the company had decided to let Culver out. Culver remained in town a few days and then moved his family to Chicago. It is stated by the state authorities that he has not yet been placed under arrest but, in view of the indictment, he will be arrested soon.

This move, to indict Culver, will be a shock to his friends for they had felt that the company did not have anything on him or he would never have asked for the investigation. Culver insisted he took this step when he suspected that Connor had been dishonest.

On the other hand, Connor, all along, insisted that he had had help in the thefts, in fact, claimed that he was forced to steal by a man higher up who had demanded that he get a share of the thefts or he would expose him to the officials. The thefts continued long and Connor has claimed that he divided with the man higher up, who, the state now claims, was Culver.

"Cold Snap" Incident.

During a "cold snap" at the Summit on the Esquimaux and Naininau railway line, 20 miles from Victoria, B. C., on Feb. 14th last, a fawn of the last season sought shelter in the lee of the railway water tank, which, owing to the constantly dripping water, was scarcely a comfortable refuge. Exhaustion and the cold proved too much for the youngster, and it was found frozen to death. A hunting dog, its natural enemy, was found curled up beside the deer, they having apparently sought warmth in mutual companionship. The dog was living, and has completely recovered.—Wide World.

FORMER RESIDENT DEAD

The Remains of Mrs. William Scherf, of Withee, Wis., Brought Here

Tuesday afternoon of this week at her home at Withee, Wis., occurred the death of Mrs. William Scherf, a well known former resident of this village. Her death coming as the culmination of a long and painful illness from a complication of troubles, beginning with a serious case of rheumatism and later developing into a tubercular trouble from which she had been a great sufferer although a most patient one to the last. Her death was not unexpected as her sisters had been sent for some few days previous to her death.

Miss Mary Bartlett was born in the year of 1866 and passed away at her home at Withee, Wis., on the fourth day of October 1910 at the age of forty-four years.

She was united in marriage to William Scherf and to them one child, a daughter was born, who with the father remains to mourn the loss of a most devoted wife and mother.

For a number of years Mr. and Mrs. Scherf were residents of our village and while here united with Irwin District Court of Honor to which she still belonged at the time of her death.

Disposing of their interests hereabout nine years ago they moved to Withee, Wis., and since that time that place has been their home.

The deceased leaves to mourn her loss besides her husband and daughter, her mother, Mrs. John Pitcher of Trevor, Wis., three sisters, Mrs. Charles Sibley of Antioch, Mrs. William Evans of Trevor, and Mrs. David Rae of Fargo, N. D., besides many other relatives and friends.

The remains were brought here on the 4:41 train Wednesday afternoon and taken to the Sibley home. The funeral was held at the Antioch M. E. church this (Thursday) afternoon at 1:30 o'clock, with Rev. A. W. Safford of Millburn officiating, and the members of the local Court attending in a body, the bearers and six ladies acting as flower bearers also being chosen from that order. The remains were laid to rest in the Liberty cemetery.

The sympathy of the community goes out to that home bereft of the presence of its loved one.

For a Successful Bridge Party.

Take a liberal assortment of women, preferably an odd number, and sprinkle at intervals around an overheated room. Add one hat for each, and if the room is not large enough to hold them, let them project over the edge. Make a stuffing of sandwiches, chocolate cake, olives and tea, and line each woman with it. Season liberally with spice prepared from the latest gossip, and add a few peppery tempers. Some people garnish with cards, but these may be omitted without injury to the dish.

MYSTERIOUS DEATH OF EVELYN RENTNER PROVES GUN WOUND

Elmer Rentner, the Nine-Year-Old Son of August Rentner, Who Lives East of Town, Accidentally Shoots His Five-Year-Old Sister

PICKS REVOLVER FROM FLOOR WHEN IT IS DISCHARGED

Much Mystery Surrounds the Case Until the Arrival of Coroner Taylor Who Probed the Wound and Found the Bullet Embedded in the Spine—Elmer Rentner Finally Tells How Accident Occurred

One of the most sad as well as the most mysterious of tragedies that we have ever been called upon to record was enacted in this vicinity Tuesday afternoon between three and four o'clock at the home of August Rentner, on the old Jas. Brogan farm just east of town, when little Evelyn, the five years old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rentner, was killed in a most mystifying manner.

Mr. Rentner was working in a nearby field while his wife was busy in the garden in the rear of the house. The little girl had been playing near the mother until the eldest child Elmer, a boy between eight and nine years of age, returned home from school when the children went into the house to play. A short time later the mother was alarmed to hear a piercing shriek from the boy and rushing to the house she beheld her little daughter, on the bed room floor her right arm thrown above her head and the left grasping the bed, profusely bleeding from a wound over the heart and from the mouth while little Elmer was kneeling by the side of his sister trying to staunch the flow of blood.

The almost frantic mother was soon joined by the father who had also heard the scream and a physician, Dr. Beebe, was summoned, who although he made all possible haste reached the house just as the little one breathed her last.

Upon examination he found that the little one's death was caused by a wound that had pierced the lung to all appearances made by a knife or other sharp instrument or possibly by a bullet. But how inflicted was the mystery. In playing did she fall upon some sharp object and accidentally injure herself or was she struck with something in the hands of the older child and in either case what became of the weapon? were unanswered questions. A thorough search of the premises was made by the parents, physician and neighbors in an effort to discover some instrument that might have inflicted the wound but nothing was found. If the child fell upon some object would it not have been near her? If struck by the older child would he in his fright have hidden the weapon and if so would it not have been found? was also asked.

The boy was the only one who could shed any light on the matter and he was for the most part silent only declaring that he did not know what hurt his sister. Coaxing and threats had the same effect upon him and nothing definite could be learned from him. He only asserted that he did not see his sister have anything in her hands with which she might have hurt herself, that they were not playing together when it happened and that no one had entered the house while they were alone. Dr. Beebe acting on the theory that it might have been a bullet examined the firearms but did not think that any of them showed signs of recent firing and thus the matter stood until Wednesday afternoon.

Coroner Taylor was summoned but did not arrive until Wednesday noon when he empaneled a jury and the inquest was held bringing out facts that put an entirely different light on the matter. Coroner Taylor in an effort to get at the root of the matter probed the wound and finally located a bullet from a thirty-two caliber revolver imbedded in the little one's spine. When the bullet was extracted and shown to the boy he broke down and told as near as he could what had happened. The substance of his story was this. After playing with his sister for a time they went into the bedroom where the little fellow opened a bureau drawer for the purpose of taking out an arithmetic and in so doing he accidentally pulled the revolver out onto the floor. He stooped to pick it up and in some manner discharged the weapon, fatally injuring his sister. In his fright he replaced the revolver and closed the drawer at the same time screaming for his parents.

Whether it was fright or fear of punishment that kept him so long silent is not known.

The jury consisting of Chas. Webb, John Colegrove, C. Christensen, Wm. Turner, Sheriff Griffin and Willbur Hunter returned a verdict of accidental death from a bullet wound in the right breast inflicted by a revolver in the hands of her brother.

The funeral will be held at the home Friday morning at 9:30 o'clock and the remains will be taken on the 11:01 train to Altenheim for burial.

FURNISHINGS OF SHILOH HOUSE TO BE SOLD

Wednesday morning Capt. Walker of Zion City moved all of the furniture out of Alexander Dowie's old residence the Shiloh house at Zion, and it is now in the furniture store where it will be put in shape for sale.

Much of the fine fixtures of which Dowie once boasted will thus go on sale and souvenir hunters will be able to obtain relics of his once most beautiful home.

The expensive furnishings of the administration building will also be put in shape for sale. Among these articles is included the famous, long, thousand dollar table, about which the famous councils of importance regarding the management and the future of Zion was held in Dowie's time.

HEYDECKER GETS OFFICE

Is Appointed Master in Chancery to Succeed Elam L. Clarke

Attorney Edward J. Heydecker of the firm of Heydecker and Parmelee, of Waukegan, was Wednesday appointed by Judge Donnelly as Master in Chancery to succeed Elam L. Clarke, who has held the office for many years.

Mr. Heydecker's bond has been filed and he therefore is now the master in chancery of Lake county.

The appointment of Mr. Heydecker is in accordance with an agreement which was reported to have been made a year ago when Master Clarke sought reappointment and Mr. Heydecker sought the place also. Both men had signatures of many attorneys, about half divided, asking the appointment. Mr. Clarke was finally reappointed but the report came out that an understanding had been reached whereby he was to hold the office but one year longer, whereupon Mr. Heydecker would be appointed.

The fact that the appointment has been made indicates that such an agreement was made.

Mr. Clarke has made a most efficient master and held the office to the satisfaction of all. Mr. Heydecker on the other hand, will also make a good man sitting as presiding judge in many important cases, for, as master, his duties carry along much judicial work. In many respects, such as settling estates, the work of master is more important than that of the circuit judge and great care has to be shown by a master. His decisions go to the judges and are asked for on such cases as the judges cannot spare the time to consider.

Mr. Heydecker's appointment will be received with favor among his many friends who have been expecting for some time he would be handed the plum.

A FAMILY NEAR DEATH

Six in Danger and One May Die as Result of Eating Toad Stools

The eating of toad stools which were mistaken for mushrooms nearly resulted in the death of six people in Waukegan Wednesday noon. The promptness with which a physician was summoned and the heroic measures which he adopted were all that saved the lives of the family.

Those who were made ill were Mr. and Mrs. Lazzaroni, their daughter Jennie, Paul Thompson, a grandson, Peter Mittilini, a guest and Ida Vonossi, a hired girl.

While all the members of the family who ate the mushrooms were taken violently ill the hired girl was the worst on account of refusing to take medicine and for a time it was feared that she might die as a result of her persistence.

When Peter Mittilini, an old friend of the family who is visiting them at the present time, arose from the breakfast table he remarked that it looked like a good day to collect mushrooms and started out returning a few hours later with a basket well filled with what appeared to mushrooms.

Mrs. Lazzaroni considered herself an expert in such matters and proceeded to test the fungi in the same way she always did, that is to place garlic in it and if it turned black it was supposed to be poison. This time it did not change color and supposing that it was mushrooms she hesitated no longer.

Shortly after dinner the whole family became seriously ill and it was with difficulty that their lives were saved.

Science and Statues.

Goodyear's discoveries in vulcanization of rubber not only have almost made a new world of comforts and conveniences, but opened vast new golden mines, greater than of the Rand or famed Tarapaca, of wealth to be measured only by terms of millions, if not billions. A rubber supply grows as it is used, but gold and oil can suffer no increase over old earth's deposits. All this comes from the mind of science, but it looks to me like a cold day and a good many years before we Yanks give Goodyear a statue. Science does not care much for statues, anyhow.—New York Press.

Women Smokers.

The women smoker, far from being a result of a decadent civilization is merely a survival of a rougher and harder life. Even today the women who live the hardest lives compatible with twentieth century civilization smoke incessantly. Go into any tramping lodge house and you will find not only old and young women, but boys and girls scarcely in their teens puffing contentedly, not at cigarettes, but clay pipes, charged with black twist tobacco. It is part of the etiquette of the "road" for the men after they have vigorously puffed at "daddies" to hand them to the women tramps who have no supply.—London Chronicle.

CYCLONE HITS LAKE ZURICH

Sweeps the Countryside and Leaves General Ruin in Wake, Tuesday

MUCH DAMAGE IS DONE

Funnel Shaped Cloud Hanging Low in the South Ran Across the Lake and Went to Church

Lake Zurich now knows what a cyclone is without having visited Kansas.

Tuesday afternoon at 4:30 a low hanging funnel shaped cloud traversed the lake and the village from the south and west, the whole storm taking but ten minutes of wind and rain and when it had passed roofs were torn off, there were but few whole lights of glass left in Lake Zurich dwelling, trees were down, ice houses were torn apart and boat houses were blown into the lake, the last named of which was lashed into a creamy foam.

The heavens were dark and ominous and preceding the coming of the cloud, which was seen by hundreds, there was a forbidding hush over everything.

The following are some of the things that the real guaranteed cyclone did to Lake Zurich.

Took the roof off the Knickerbocker ice house and laid the ice house open to the elements.

Dumped over steel wind mills on the Henry Bushing and other farms.

Broke every light of glass in the village.

Dumped over straw stacks on J. C. Munter's place.

Knocked over twenty-five or thirty trees in the village itself and many scores in the woods surrounding.

Turned over sheds on the Ficke place.

Destroyed outhouses and sheds galore.

Sept a score of boat houses into the lake.

The cyclone have completely covered a swath a half mile wide that begins on the south west shore of the lake and extends to the grounds of St. Peters church, where the fresh storm knocked down trees and fences and then suddenly subsided. It was not heard of again in the vicinity.

Cyclones are as rare as the dodo in this section and not in the memory of the oldest inhabitant has such a visitation been made at peaceful Lake Zurich. Waukegan people claim to have seen the cloud that wrecked the have also and those who did not say that they saw the darkness in the west at the time the cyclone swept Lake Zurich.

Chimneys all over the village are shattered and there is much work for a mason or two, while awnings of the stores and the like went up with the first puff.

MRS. TAFT GIVES OIL PAINTING TO CHURCH

Mrs. William Howard Taft, wife of the president of the United States, and by virtue of her occupancy with the president of the White House, the first lady of the land, has on request of Mrs. David Scott of Libertyville, donated to the Libertyville Catholic church a fine oil landscape of which the society will make use. The painting is quite large and is said to be an excellent bit of work. It will be shown at the bazaar. The bazaar will be held the last week in October.

The first story was to the effect that President Taft had sent his check for a "chance" on the picture, but Mrs. Scott indignantly denies this and says that the president has not been heard from.

The Waukegan Church of the Immaculate Conception will hold its bazaar at the Battery C. Armory the same week as the Libertyville church, members of which are now trying to get President Taft's autograph.

The Courage of Captain Plum

SYNOPSIS.

Capt. Nathaniel Plum, of the sloop Typhoon, lands secretly on Denver Island, stronghold of the Mormons. He is suddenly confronted by Obadiah Price, an eccentric old man and a member of the Mormon council, who tells him that he is expected. Price ignores Nat's protestations that he has not the wrong man, and bargains for the ammunition aboard the sloop. He bids Nat to see the frightened face of a young woman who disappears in the darkness, leaving an odor of lilacs. It develops that Plum's visit to the island is to demand settlement from the king, Strang, for the looting of his ship some time previously, supposedly by Mormons. Casey, the mate, has been left in charge of the sloop with orders to bombard St. James if Nat does not return within a certain time. Price takes Nat to the darkness, to the king's home, and through a window he sees the king and his wives, among whom is the lady of the lilacs, whom Price says is the seventh wife. Plum calls at the king's office, where he is warned by a young woman that his life is in danger. Strang resolves Plum's cowardly protest of indignation when he hears the captain's grievance, and promises to punish the guilty. Plum again receives warning of his danger. He resolves Nell, who is being publicly whipped. The king orders Arbor Creech, the sheriff and father of Winnie, to send the girl who warned Nat, to pursue and kill the two men.

CHAPTER V

The Mystery.

Hardly had Nathaniel fought his way through the thin crowd of startled spectators about the whipping post before the enormity of his offense interrupted the king's justice dawned upon him. He was not sorry that he had responded to the mute appeal of the girl who had entered so strangely into his life. He rejoiced at the spirit that had moved him to action, that had fired his blood and put the strength of a giant in his arms; and his nerves tingled with an unreasoning joy that he had leaped all barriers which in cooler moments would have restrained him, and which fixed in his excited brain only the memory of the beautiful face that had sought his own in those cruel moments of his suffering. The girl had turned to him and to him alone among all those men. He had heard her voice, he had felt the soft sweep of her hair as she severed the prisoner's thoughts, he had caught the flash of her eyes and the movement of her lips as he dashed himself into the crowd. And as he sped swiftly up the slope he considered himself amply repaid for all he had done. His blood was stirred as if by the fire of sharp vines; he was still in a tension of fighting excitement. Yet no sooner had he fought himself clear of the mob than his better judgment leaped into the ascendancy. If danger had been lurking for him before it was doubly threatening now and he was sufficiently possessed of the spirit of self preservation to exult at the speed with which he was enabled to leave pursuit behind. A single glance over his shoulder assured him that the man whom he had saved from the prophet's wrath was close at his heels. His first impulse was to direct his flight toward Obadiah's cabin; his second to follow the path that led to his ship. At this hour some of his men would surely be awaiting him in a small boat and once aboard the Typhoon he could continue his campaign against the Mormon king with better chances of success than as a lone fugitive on the island. Besides, he knew what Casey would do at sundown.

At the top of the slope he stopped and waited for the other to come up to him.

"I've got a ship off there," he called, pointing inland. "Take a short cut for the point at the head of the island. There's a boat waiting for us!"

Nell came up panting. He was breathing so hard that for a moment he found it impossible to speak but in his eyes there was a look that told his unbounded gratitude. They were clear, fearless eyes, with the blue glint of steel in them and, as he held out his hands to Nathaniel, they were luminous with the joy of his deliverance.

"Thank you, Captain Plum!"

He spoke his companion's name with the assurance of one who had known it for a long time. "If they loose the dogs there will be no time for the ship," he added, with a suggestive bunch of his naked shoulders. "Follow me!"

There was no alarm in his voice and Nathaniel caught the flashing gleam of white teeth as Nell smiled grimly back at him, running in the lead. From the man's eyes the master of the Typhoon had sized up his companion as a fighter. The smile—daring, confident, yet signalling their danger—assured him that he was right, and he followed close behind without question. A dozen rods up the path Nell turned into a dense thicket of briars and underbrush and for ten minutes they plunged through the pathless jungle. Now and then Nathaniel saw the three red stripes of the whipper's lash upon the bare shoulders of the man ahead and to these every step seemed to add new wounds made by the thorns. As they came out upon an old roadway the captain stripped off his coat and Nell thrust himself into it as they ran.

Even in these first minutes of their flight Nathaniel was thrilled by another thought than that of the peril behind them. Whom had he saved? Who was this clear-eyed young fellow for whom the girl had so openly sacrificed herself at the whipping post, about whom she had thrown her arms and covered with the protection of her glorious hair? With his joy at having served her there was mingled a chilling doubt as these questions formed themselves in his mind. Obadiah's vague suggestions, the scene in the king's room, the night visits of the girl to the councillor's cabin—and last of all this incident at the fall flashed upon him now with another meaning, with a significance that slowly cooled the enthusiasm in his veins. He was sure that he was near the solution of the mysterious events in which he had become involved, and yet this knowledge brought with it something of apprehension, something which made him anticipate and yet dread the moment when the fugitive ahead would stop in his flight, and he might ask him those questions which would at least relieve him of his burden of doubt. They had traveled a mile through forest unbroken by path or road when Nell halted on the edge of a little stream that ran into a swamp. Pointing into the tangled fen with a confident smile he plunged to his waist in the water and waded slowly through the slough into the gloom of the densest alder. A few minutes later he turned in to the shore and the soft bog gave place to firm ground. Before Nathaniel had cleared the stream he saw his companion drop to his knees beside a fallen log and when he came up to him he was unwrapping a piece of canvas from about a gun. With a warning gesture he rose to his feet and for twenty seconds the men stood and listened. No sound came to them but the chirp of a startled squirrel and the barking of a dog in the direction of St. James.

"They haven't turned out the dogs yet," said Nell, holding a hand against his heaving chest. "If they do they can't reach us through that slough." He leaned his rifle against the log and again thrusting an arm into the place where it had been concealed drew forth a small box.

"Powder and ball—and grub!" he laughed. "You see I am a sort of revolutionist and have my hiding places. Tomorrow—I will be a martyr." He spoke as quietly as though his words but carried a careless jest.

"A martyr?" laughed Nathaniel, looking down into the smiling, sweating face.

"Yes, tomorrow I shall kill Strang." There was no excitement in Nell's voice as he stood erect. The smile did not leave his lips. But in his eyes there shone that which neither words nor smiling lips revealed, a reckless, blazing fury hidden deep in them—so deep that Nathaniel stared to assure himself what it was. The other saw the doubt in his face.

"Tomorrow I shall kill Strang," he repeated. "I shall kill him with this gun from under the window of his house through which you saw Marion."

"Marion!" exclaimed Nathaniel. "Marion—No! He leaped forward eagerly, questioning. 'Tell me—'"

"My sister, Captain Plum!"

It seemed to Nathaniel that every fiber in his body was stretched to the breaking point. He reached out, dazed by what he had heard and with both hands seized Nell's arm.

"Your sister—who came to you at the whipping post?"

"That was Marion."

"And—Strang's wife?"

"No!" cried Nell. "No—not his wife!" He drew back from Nathaniel's touch as if the question had stung him to the heart. The passion that had slumbered in his eyes burst into savage flame and his face became suddenly terrible to look upon. There was hatred there such as Nathaniel had never seen; a ferocious, pitiless hatred that sent a shuddering thrill through him as he stood before it. After a moment the clenched fist that had risen above Nell's head dropped to his side. Half apologetically he held out his hand to his companion.

"Captain Plum, we've got a lot to thank you for, Marion and I," he said, a tremble of the passing emotion in his voice. "Obadiah told Marion that help might come to us through you and Marion brought the word to me at the fall last night—after she had seen you at the window. The old councillor kept his word! You have saved her!"

"Saved her!" gasped Nathaniel. "From what? How?" A hundred questions seemed leaping from his heart to his lips.

"From Strang. Good God, don't you understand? I tell you that I am going to kill Strang!"

Nell stood as though appalled by his companion's incomprehension. "I am going to kill Strang, I tell you!" he cried again, the fire burning deeper through the sweat of his cheeks.

Nathaniel's bewilderment still shone in his face.

"She is not Strang's wife," he spoke softly, as if to himself. "And she is not—" His face flushed as he nearly spoke the words. "Obadiah lied!" He looked squarely into Nell's eyes. "No, I don't understand you. The councillor said that she—that Marion was Strang's wife. He told me nothing more than that, nothing of her trouble, nothing about you. Until this moment I have been completely mystified. Only her eyes led me to do what I did at the fall."

Nell gazed at him in astonishment. "Obadiah told you—nothing?" he asked incredulously.

"Not a word about you or Marion except that Marion was the king's seventh wife. But he hinted at many things and kept me on the trail, always expecting, always watching, and yet every hour was one of mystery. I am in the darkest of it at this instant. What does it all mean? Why are you going to kill Strang? Why?"

Nell interrupted him with a cry so poignant in its wretchedness that the last question died upon his lips.

"I thought that the councillor had told you all," he said. "I thought you knew." The disappointment in his voice was almost despair. "Then—it was only accidentally—you helped us?"

"Only accidentally that I helped you—yes! But Marion—" Nathaniel crushed Nell's hand in both his own and his eyes betrayed more than he would have said. "Two got an armed ship and a dozen men out there and if I can help Marion by blowing up St. James—I'll do it!"

For a time only the tense breathing of the two broke the silence of their lips. They looked into each other's face, Nathaniel with all the eagerness of the passion with which Marion had stirred his soul, Nell half doubting, as if he were trying to find in this man's eyes the friendship which he had not questioned a few minutes before.

"Obadiah told you nothing?" he asked again, as if still unbelieving.

"Nothing."

"And you have not seen Marion—to talk with her?"

"No."

Nathaniel had dropped his companion's hand, and now Nell walked to the log and sat down with his face turned in the direction from which their pursuers must come if they entered the swamp.

Suddenly the memory of Obadiah's note shot into Nathaniel's head, the councillor's admonition, his allusion to a visitor. With this memory there recurred to him Obadiah's words at the temple, "If you had remained at the cabin, Nat, you would have known that I was your friend. She would have come to you, but now—it is impossible." For the first time the truth began to dawn upon him. He went and sat down beside Nell.

Damages for a Sale of Morphine.

An important decision with reference to the sale of morphine has recently been given by the Tenth Chamber Correctionnelle. A pharmaceutical chemist having sold morphine without a medical prescription to a student at Nancy, the latter gave it to one of his comrades, who as a result of taking it contracted the morphine habit. The father of the victim then brought an action for damages against the chemist, who in his defense said, in the first place, that he was responsible only for his own action, but not for the action of the student who had given the morphine to his comrade, and in the second place, that he had no direct connection with the injury sustained by the consumer of the morphine. The lower court upheld this view, but the higher tribunal ordered the chemist to pay 100 francs fine and 1,000 francs damages on the ground that a pharmaceutical chemist who sells a poisonous substance without a medical prescription knows that he is liable for whatever misuse may be made of it, either by the first recipient or by the next person who comes into possession of it—Paris letter to the London Lancet.

Not Very Accurate.

Senator Root at Senator Depew's farewell dinner in his honor in Washington, said, about his European tour, "Well, I hope I'll gather over there more accurate information than that which Lady Salisbury's housekeeper used to give her American visitors."

Lady Salisbury had a housekeeper who, in showing American and other visitors over Salisbury castle, would always pause before a painting of Catherine d'Medici, sister of Venus d'Medici, and say:

"This lovely painting is a portrait of Catherine d'Medici, sister of Venus d'Medici."

BREAKS AIR RECORD

WALTER BROOKINGS FLIES 186 MILES IN FIVE HOURS 49 MINUTES.

WINS $10,000 CASH PRIZE

Young Aviator Surpasses All Cross-Country Flights in His Chicago to Springfield (Ill.) Trip—Out-Displaces Special Train.

Springfield, Ill.—What is looked upon as one of the most remarkable feats in aerial navigation was accomplished by Walter B. Brookings, in a Wright biplane, Thursday, when he successfully flew from Chicago to this city, and in doing so he broke all cross-country aeronautic records.

With only two stops, neither of which was actually necessary, he made the trip from Chicago to Springfield, a distance of 186 miles, in five hours and forty-nine minutes, maintaining an average speed of 32.7 miles an hour, and won the $10,000 prize offered by a Chicago newspaper.

Along the entire route, from Chicago to the state fair grounds here, hundreds of thousands of people cheered the daring young aviator as he passed. As the great mechanical bird came to the ground here in the presence of 40,000 people he was cheered vociferously for fully half an hour.

Brookings left Chicago at 9:15 a. m. He dropped out of the clouds over the fair grounds in Springfield at 4:45.

Forty-seven minutes after Brookings rose from the ground in Washington park, Chicago, the "Daylight Special" left the Park Row station over the Illinois Central. A special car had been attached in which traveled Wilbur Wright, the airplane inventor; Roy Knabenshue, special representative of the Wright brothers; members of the Aero club of Illinois, and about forty newspaper men.

After a flight of two hours and twenty-eight minutes Brookings came to Gilman, where he arrived at 11:43. Brookings was far ahead of the train and he decided to alight and await the arrival of the train.

The train arrived at Gilman at 12:15 and orders were given by the division superintendent of the railroad to hold the train until the biplane should resume its flight. The gasoline and water tanks were replenished, and after the engines had been gone over carefully by Wright and Knabenshue, Brookings resumed his flight.

From Gilman to Springfield the special train and the aeroplane ran neck and neck, first one forging ahead, then the other, but never at any time more than a quarter of a mile apart.

Brookings was forced at 3:20 to descend at Mt. Pulaski for fuel, only twenty-four miles from the state fair grounds. The landing was one of the most remarkable that has ever been seen in the history of aviation. Trees and fences surrounded him on all sides and with perfect control he picked out a spot, after soaring about in a short circle, scarcely more than half a block square, and landed square in the center. The special train was held up, the aeroplane's supplies again were renewed, and at 3:45 he ascended again. From Pulaski to the fair grounds a speed of thirty-five miles an hour was maintained.

PRAISE FOR LA FOLLETTE

CONVENTION CALLS SENATOR PIONEER PROGRESSIVE.

Wisconsin Republicans Declare Payne Tariff Law Falls to Carry Out Party Pledge.

Madison, Wis.—Sharp criticism of the Payne tariff law, a demand for the physical valuations of railroads and unqualified praise of Senator La Follette as the pioneer "progressive" are the principal planks of the platform adopted by the Republican state convention Wednesday.

Indorsement of the state's strongly "insurgent" delegation in congress and a slap at President Taft are expressed in the following resolution:

"Wisconsin is to be congratulated upon having representatives in the senate and house who remained true to the people and to the national platform of the party, notwithstanding the efforts to punish them, for so doing, by withdrawal of federal patronage."

On the tariff platform says: "The Payne-Aldrich tariff, is not a compliance with the pledge of the Republican party in its national platform. The true basis of protective tariff is the difference between the cost of production at home and abroad, and we hold any increased cost of production of living of American labor should be accompanied by compensating tariff duties."

"The present tariff board has no power of investigation, and is not required to report to congress. We favor the creation of a nonpartisan tariff committee empowered to ascertain the cost of production in this and other countries, and required to make frequent reports of the information gained in congress."

"Upon the information so obtained congress should proceed to revise the different schedules independently of each other, according to true protective tariff principles."

GIRL AND TWO BOYS SHOT

Children of John F. Dietz, Wisconsin Fugitive, Fired On by Sheriff—Youth Warns Father.

Coudersville, Wis., Oct. 3.—In a futile effort to capture John F. Dietz, the "outlaw of Cameron Dam," three of the Dietz children were shot and two of the three wounded were captured. The other escaped to warn his father of the raid.

Dietz is charged with shooting a man in an election row September 1 and has defied the authorities. The sheriff expected him to go to Winter, and waited for him at the side of a road. When the Dietz buggy approached, Sheriff Madden ordered the three occupants to throw up their hands, and when they failed to obey fired at close range.

Dietz had stayed at home, having learned that the sheriff was near, and had sent his daughter with his sons, thinking the officers would not shoot if she was near. She, as well as the boys, was armed. Leslie Dietz escaped through a shower of bullets. Fifty residents of Winter, many old-time friends of Dietz, have been sworn in as special under sheriffs and the city is patrolled constantly under instructions from Sheriff Madden, who fears the wrath of the defender of Cameron dam.

DOCTOR ADVISED OPERATION

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Galena, Kans.—"A year ago last March I fell, and a few days after there was soreness in my right side. In a short time a bunch came and it bothered me so much at night I could not sleep. It kept growing larger and by fall it was as large as a hen's egg. I could not go to bed without a hot water bottle applied to that side. I had one of the best doctors in Kansas and he told my husband that I would have to be operated on as it was something like a tumor caused by a rupture. I wrote to you for advice and you told me not to get discouraged but to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did take it and soon the lump in my side broke and passed away."—Mrs. R. H. Hurst, 713 Mineral Ave., Galena, Kans.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has proved to be the most successful remedy for curing the worst forms of female ills, including displacements, inflammation, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result has been worth millions to many suffering women.

If you want special advice write for it to Mrs. E. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass. It is free and always helpful.

Katherine—No, truly I didn't. Josephine got there first.—Harper's Bazar.

No Help Needed. A little miss of five years who had been allowed to stay up for an evening party, was told about 8:30 to go to bed. Very, very slowly she moved toward the stairs. An aunt, seeing her reluctant, asked:

"Helen, can I do anything to help you?"

"No," replied Helen, "I will get there altogether too soon as it is."

Points to Good Future. Seven poor children, four girls and three boys, all about ten years old, went to a nearby seashore resort, in charge of two women, for a day's outing. The funds for the picnic were provided by two boys who sell papers and who live in one of the two houses from which the excursion party was recruited. One of the women in charge of the children said that the boys had arranged the outing of their own accord, and the remarkable thing is this: They are not good boys by any means and one of them is probably the naughtiest boy in the neighborhood. But we think that when boys do little things like this they will come out all right.—New York Tribune.

THE TOAD OUR BEST FRIEND

by EDWARD B. CLARK

COPYRIGHT BY W.A. PATTERSON

UNCLE SAM'S scientists have had more than one good word to say for the toad. Several government publications have been issued, I am told, telling about the toad and its good work. There is no department in nature which is overlooked by the scientists of Secretary of Agriculture James Wilson's department. If it is believed by the experts that any benefit may come to the people of the United States by the study of the habits of a particular animal, that animal is studied forthwith and studied carefully.

In folk lore history and in the history of localities which hardly can be classed as folk lore, the frog and the toad frequently have been confused; sometimes stories have been told of frog visitations and it has turned out that the invading army was composed of toads. The reverse of the statement also has been found to be true on several occasions.

Some years ago an army of track-hopping tramp toads took possession of the gravel road bed of the Sioux City and Pacific railway, and in unbroken column miles in length, as the local story had it, the toads marched past the town of Blencoe, Iowa. It is stated that there were so many millions in this mighty army that nothing like an accurate estimate of the toads could be made. The ground was said to be brown with the color of its visitants.

If there was such an army of the batrachians as it is said there was it would be no wonder if the residents of the infested district might have feared that the toads would divert their course from the railroad into the towns, to repeat Pharaoh's plague of the frogs. "When the rivers brought forth frogs abundantly, which went up into the houses, and into the bed chambers, and even upon the beds, and upon the people, and even into the ovens and into the kneading troughs."

Now the toad is not nearly so handsome a being as is his frog cousin. He never could "awoaling go" like his green-coated brother, despite the fact that Shakespeare proclaims that his toadship has a few in his head. Ugly and venomous, the bard of Avon writes the toad down, and ugly and venomous to the people's mind in many places he is to this day, although in reality he ranks with the birds as one of humanity's best friends. As a matter of fact, it is likely that the brown-skinned army which moved without banners in military array some years ago was on the march to meet the great army of Rocky Mountain locusts which was moving steadily forward in an opposite direction and in General Sherman's words, "Foraging liberally upon the country."

Even though the toads are so harmless and helpful, they perhaps will never get anyone to love them. It must be admitted that appearances are against them. The Iowa people who some years ago were visited by the toads had no reason to arrogate to themselves any particular distinction on account of the visitation, for in scores of instances the animals have appeared in immense bodies, and in some cases, without any intention so to do, they have inaugurated veritable reigns of terror.

Years ago, in the little Puritan settlement of Windham, Conn., out of which sprang as many notable American families, perhaps, as have come from any other colonial hamlet, a migration of toads led the people to believe that the toads of the last day had been sounded, and they were all summoned, sinners and saints, to answer at the bar of judgment. Tradition says that the migration which brought this fear upon the people was one of the frogs. Scientists of today lean rather to the toad theory, but it made little difference to the frightened populace which species of batrachian brother it was that brought horror into their midst.

Now it happened that there lived in Windham two colonial colonels, big men and dignified, by names Dyer and Elderkin. It may do no harm at this late date to say that both these military titled gentlemen were more fond of good living, so the story goes, than was perhaps exactly consistent with the strictest Puritan thoughts. Some of the elders of the place, it is said, looked a bit askance at some of the views of Colonels Dyer and Elderkin. There were slaves in that day in Connecticut and Windham held its share.

One peaceful night in May the Windham families retired at their usual hour, not long after "candle light." At midnight they were wrapped in the profoundest slumber, but no sleep however sound could withstand the roar that broke upon that peaceful hamlet in the watches of the night. There were blotted noises of a million throats. It was guttural, harsh and horrible, and it came out of the jetty blackness of midnight. The people of Windham jumped from their beds panic-stricken, threw on what clothes they could, and rushed outdoors, many bearing pine torches, which ate little light holes in the lanky blackness.

The slaves were prostrated with fear and clung to the knees of their masters. The noise ceased not for an instant, but on the contrary increased with every moment, and then, to the added horror of all, the noise found shape in words which one quick-eyed, imaginative woman interpreted into this, all but two of the people accepting the interpretation readily: "Judgment day; Judgment day; Colonel Dyer and Elderkin too, and catch a nigger too."

It is perhaps needless to say that the only two people among the white inhabitants of Windham who did not thoroughly accept the interpretation were Colonels Dyer and Elderkin. In a few minutes the light of the torches showed an immense concourse of toads or frogs, whichever they were, bearing down the main street of the town, croaking and "glucking" like a myriad of night demons. It suddenly struck the people that if Judgment day was at hand, notwithstanding the fact that Colonels Dyer and Elderkin seemed to have been singled out by the visitors, the day of accounting according to the Bible was an all-embracing affair, and thereat all the Windham people started trembling violently.

There are living today a good many persons who are direct descendants of the Colonel Elderkin whom the batrachians called to judgment that night. In Chicago until recently there lived a Mrs. Charlotte Perkins Norris, a direct descendant of Colonel Elderkin. Mrs. Norris had heard the story of the invasion of the village a score of times from the lips of her grandmother, who as a child was taken time after time to see the place from which the night disturbers came. To the days of their deaths Colonels Dyer and Elderkin were called Frog Dyer and Frog Elderkin, and if local Connecticut authorities are to be believed, there has not been seen from that day to this either a toad or a frog in the meadow and pond from which started that midnight migration.

To get away, for a moment, from frogs and toads, and in order to lead back to them again, let it be said that out in Utah the gull is a carefully protected bird. Olive Thorne Miller speaks of them as "great, beautiful, snowy creatures who look strangely out of place so far from the seashore." I have been told that these gulls are sacredly protected by the law and the people of the western state, and I have also been told that the early settlers, the Mormons, believed that the Lord has sent the birds to his chosen people.

It is no wonder that it was believed the gulls were specially sent. Clouds of grasshoppers had destroyed the crops in that early day in many of the western territories. They attacked Utah by the million millions. Then it was that the large "tangle-legged" grasshoppers. Master toad took kindly to this species of food, but owing to the nature of the insect's legs and their extreme length he found difficulty in swallowing. In order to aid in the process, as soon as he would get a firm grip on the grasshopper he would look for a stick or a stone by means of pushing against which he could force his prey down his throat. Now in order to see what the toad would do if no stone or stick were at hand, all of these articles were removed from his vicinity, and then he was fed another big grasshopper with great knotted legs.

NOTHING LIKE AN ACCURATE ESTIMATE COULD BE MADE

THERE WERE BLENDING THE NOISES OF A MILLION THROATS

Now it must be remembered that the present writer is not vouching for this toad story; he is simply setting it down as it has been told by an observer, and if it is a "nature fake" the blame must go elsewhere. The toad, finding he could not swallow the big grasshopper, looked about as usual for a stone and, finding none, he attempted to use the ground as a pusher. He was unable to get the right angle to secure sufficient force, and as a last and perfectly effective means, he stood on his head and without the least difficulty forced his food down his throat.

This toad unquestionably was a wonder. One day, we are told, he happened to find an angworm of great length. He took hold of one end and succeeded in swallowing about an inch and a half of the worm, which then realizing its danger apparently, wound the rest of its body ball-like around the neck of the toad. This gave the worm leverage enough to enable it to tug away at that part which the toad already had swallowed. The result was that although by a mighty effort the toad could swallow about half an inch, the worm, when the relaxation came, succeeded in withdrawing three-quarters of an inch. The toad saw his breakfast slipping away from him, but his infinite wit came to his rescue. It is said that he sat up like a squirrel took one mighty swallow, and then before the worm could get in its withdrawing work, he pressed his forefoot against his throat and held the swallowed part of the breakfast in place; then, so the story goes, by a series of quick successive swallowing and throat squeezing, the toad soon had the worm in the dark interior where he was needed for breakfast.

Toad migrations are not extraordinarily uncommon events. They have taken place in many parts of the country, and once the toads in traveling succeeded in stalling a railroad train on the Canadian Pacific line. The story of this runs to the effect that the wheels crushed the creatures and so greased the rails that progress was impossible for some time. The passengers said that they could have stood the situation more philosophically if the blockaders had been frogs, for then the question of the food supply would have been settled for a lot of hungry people. Frogs' legs make good eating.

It is not generally known, perhaps, to the layman that toads, like frogs, lay their eggs in the water. Countless millions of eggs will be deposited in some morass. They hatch out, the young get big enough, and migrate in a body to the dry land, sometimes going long distances as an entity. These, it is said, are the marching armies of toads which astonish people and accounts of which are spread broadcast over the earth.

Straw Hats and Autos

"You might scarcely think," said Mr. MacBlink, "that there was anything in common between straw hats and automobiles, but by that way of thinking you'd be surely forgetting their cost of upkeep, in which respect they are strikingly alike."

"They say it costs more to keep an automobile than it does to buy one; precisely the same is true of the straw hat. You take my own experience for an illustration."

"Early in the season I bought a straw hat for which I paid $2. I know a place where you can get a very good straw hat for that money, and if it didn't rain all summer I should have been on the straw hat account under no additional expense."

"But it always does rain more or less, just as it has done this summer, and as is very well known if a drop of rain gets on a straw hat it is all up. Raindrops on a straw hat will accumulate dust, and then you have to have the hat cleaned, and that costs money; in some places 25 cents; in some 15."

"I find by reference to my books that I have paid out this summer in straw hat account for upkeep only $2.30, which is a good deal. While the automobile man has been spending his money for gasoline and things I have been blowing mine for hat cleaning, and it has cost me more to keep that hat going than it cost me originally."

"But in this I find some slight satisfaction. In this respect at least I find myself on the same footing with the man who at the beginning of the season bought instead of a straw hat an automobile."

Soon after using Doan's Kidney Pills I was able to walk without crutches. I gradually improved until I ceased to groan and the kidneys became normal."

Good Advice, hut—A traveler entered a railway carriage at a wayside station. The sole occupants of the compartment consisted of an old lady and her son, about twelve years old. Nothing of note occurred until the train steamed into the station at which tickets were collected. The woman, not having a ticket for the boy, requested him to "corrie down."

The traveler intervened and suggested putting him under the seat. "Man," said the excited woman, "it's as shair as dath; but there's twa under the seat already!"

Filling With Fashion.

That innate tendency on the part of the fair consumer to flirt with fashion, playing fast and loose with various commodities, is responsible for the uncertainties that have prevailed during the month. There was such a lack of confidence as to the ultimate acceptance of the various lines prepared by distributors and consumers that buying was somewhat minimized.
